Oct. 2nd	312	12mo.	1st	2,000	Printed	2 4 0	Jadunath Mukherjee, Calcutta.	This is the second volume of the work of which the first volume was noticed in the catalogue for the second quarter of 1882. (see non-educational Bengali)	912 book No 372). The diseases treated of in this volume are chronic bronchitis, pneumonia, chronic pleurisy, and diarrhoea. The causes, symptoms, diagnosis, and treatment of these diseases are fully and clearly explained in a style which is perhaps even more easy, systematic, and popular than the style of the first volume. The work is intended for family men and village practitioners.
Sept. 30th	253	8vo.	1st	1,000	ditto	2 12 0	Mahesh Chandra Ghosh, Calcutta.	Describes some of the diseases of infancy, and their treatment after the homoeopathic method.	913
" 19th	140	12mo.	1st	1,000	ditto	0 10 0	Hariprasad Chakrabarti, Calcutta.	Describes various kinds of fever and their treatment after the homoeopathic method. The author says that fever being now a very common and devastating disease in the villages of Bengal, where good medical practitioners cannot be found, he has prepared this work in the hope that the villagers themselves would be able, with its help, to treat that disease on the cheap and simple method furnished by homoeopathy.	914
Aug. 25th	61	8vo.	1st	501	ditto	0 12 0	Basanta Kumar Datta, Calcutta.	In this volume are described the diseases of the male and female generative organs, and of the skin.	915
" 30th	128	12mo.	1st	1,000	ditto	0 8 0	Guru Gobinda Sen, Calcutta.	This is a treatise on hygiene, collected and translated from the original texts of Dhanwan-tari, a great sage and the first of the people, (2) the structure and for medicinal purposes, (3) enumeration and qualities of articles used as food, (6) qualities of liquid substances (10) house making, &c.	916
" 27th	111	8vo.	1st	50	ditto	1 0 0	Keshab Chandra Sen, 72, Upper Circular Road, Calcutta.	Sermons by Baba Keshab Chandra Sen explaining the religious principles of his church and the developments which those principles have recently undergone.	917
Sept. 13th	32	8vo.	1st	1,000	ditto	0 4 0	Girish Chandra Sen, 6, College Square, Calcutta.		918
Oct. 4th	116	8vo.	1st	1,000	ditto	1 0 0	Iswar Chandra Sen, Sankrail, Mymensingh.	This work is written with the view of counteracting the prevailing tendency of educated Hindus to adopt sceptical or un-Hindu forms of belief. It describes the fundamental principles of Hinduism in its ritualistic and in its contemplative or spiritual aspect. The necessity of these two aspects or stages and the forms of worship demanded by them respectively are explained. The writer considers the Hindu religion to be the best of all religions and Hindu learning to be the source of all other learning, ancient or modern.	919
" 1st	48	8vo.	1st	1,050	ditto			Goes on with the Ajodhya Kanda .	920
Sept. 18th	64	8vo.	2nd	1,000	ditto	0 4 0	Hem Chandra Bhattacharyya, Simla, Calcutta.	This is a revised edition. Going on with the first book.	921
Oct. 1st	64	8vo.	2nd	2,000	ditto	0 4 0	ditto	The first book is finished, and the second book taken up in this number.	922
" 29th	64	8vo.	2nd	2,000	ditto	0 4 0	ditto	Goes on with the second book	923
Aug. 2nd	48	8vo.	1st	1,000	ditto	0 4 0	Aghor Nath Battacharyya, 12, Patul-danga Street, Calcutta.	Goes on with the second book. This is the most popular version of Valmiki's poem yet issued in this country.	924

Aug. 27th	9	12mo.	2nd	1,000	Printed	0 1 0	Brahmo Samaj Mission Office, 6, College Square, Calcutta.	The sage Nārada is represented as relating to Vyāsa how religious faith first sprang up in his mind, how it grew in depth and intensity, the manner in which he realized for a moment the nature of the Deity, how he had to free himself by patient and prolonged discipline from gross desires and inclinations, and how, after doing all that he was able to give up his gross body, assume a new and purer and subtler body, and fill himself full of the real and ecstatic vision of Hari. The author's object is apparently to indicate the process of spiritual culture.	1743
Sept. 8th	16	8vo.	1st	2,500	ditto	Nil.	Krishna Gopal Bhakta, 15, Gopi Krishna Pal's Lane, Calcutta.	This is the prospectus of a scheme framed by the author for republishing in a serial form the eighteen principal Purāṇas with a Bengali translation.	1744
Oct. 1st	48	8vo.	1st	500	ditto	Nil.	Bibāchit Majumdar, Nabunala, Calcutta.	This is a letter addressed to the Vaidya community of Bengal. It is written with the view of shewing that the recent conversion of Surendranāth Barāt to Christianity by the Rev. K. S. Macdonald was not a case of fair and sincere conversion, and that Surendra Nāth has not therefore committed anything for which he must perform Hindu expiatory rites, in order to obtain readmission into his community.	1745
Sept. 22nd	20	8vo.	1st	1,000	ditto	0 2 0		The songs are composed and arranged as they would be in an opera.	1746
Sept. 2nd	91	8vo.	2nd	1,000	ditto	0 8 0	Shashibhushan Basu, Dacca.	The whole of the Tipperah caste question is reviewed and evidence is adduced to shew that the Tipperah raj family is Hindu and not non-Aryan.	1747
Sept. 30th	59	12mo. dy.	1st	500	ditto	0 2 0	Kailash Gobinda Gupta of Bāshi, Tangail.	The author says that he has in the poems contained in this volume described the thoughts and sentiments of a manager of a Hindu family, who has been deeply involved in debt for the sake of his co-parceners, and whose disinterested services to the family are now returned with their ill-feeling and ingratitude. The author seeks to teach his countrymen that where the income of a family is smaller than its expenditure, all its principal members should get themselves employed abroad, leaving the management of their domestic affairs in the hands of a person who is unconnected with them.	1748
Oct. 1st	36	12mo. dy.	1st	700	ditto	0 3 0	Raminanda Gupta, Sayadgaon.	Four poems written by a school-boy. The first poem contains a prayer to God, in the second are described the evil effects of intemperance, patriotic sentiments are expressed in the third, and in the fourth and last Bengalis are called upon not to cast a slur upon their ancient good name by indulging in the cruel practice of slaying sheep and goats before their gods and goddesses.	1749
Aug. 29th	36	12mo.	1st	500	ditto	0 4 0	Ananda Nath Maatra, Malda.	Describes the story of the exile of Sita in a half-lyrical, half-narrative form.	1750
" 10th	16	16mo.	1st	500	ditto	Nil		This poem is written at the request of the clerks employed at the office of Messrs. George Henderson & Co. of Calcutta, and gives expression to their grief at the death of Mr. Herbert Knowles, a member of that firm. A brief account of the Indian career of the deceased is given, his honesty and integrity is highly praised, and fervent gratitude is expressed for his uncommon gentleness and kindness to the poor and needy of all castes and communities.	1751
" 25th	18	16mo.	1st	100	ditto	Nil		An amatory dialogue in verse between a lotus and a bee.	1752
Sept. 26th	32	12mo.	1st	500	ditto	0 2 0	Emesh Chandra Banik, Calcutta.	Describes the loss of a steam ship purchased by a liberal-minded zemindar of Assam for promoting trade between that province and Calcutta.	1753
" 28th	32	8vo.	1st	1,000	ditto	0 1 0		Describes the feelings of a lover (1) when first united with his beloved, (2) when living with his beloved, and (3) when death has taken away his beloved.	1754

Sept. 10th	42	12mo.	1st	1,000	Printed	0 8 0	Girish Chandra Ghosh, 13, Bala-sudra Lane, Calcutta.	Describes the story of a prince who is accused by his step-mother of having made improper advances to her, and is accordingly banished. He meets with various adventures, and ultimately arrives at the Maldivo Islands. His father has in the meanwhile ascertained his innocence and the intriguing nature of his step-mother, goes out in quest of him, and on finding him presses him to return home. He feels glad at his father's discovery of his mistake, but refuses to return home, and goes his way after tearing off the garland which he wore round his neck, and which had become as it were tainted with the impurity of the accusation under which he has so long laboured.	1769
" 29th	48	8vo.	1st	300	ditto	This little drama is directed against a class of Bengali village Babus who give themselves wise and patronising airs, but are essentially selfish and envious, and delight in fostering village factions, and ruining honest well-to-do neighbours by involving them in inordinate expenditure on the occasion of festivals and other religious ceremonies.	1770
Oct. 8th	25	12mo.	1st	1,000	ditto	0 4 0	Baisnab Charan Basak.	An old man, who has married for the third time, cannot account for his young wife's indifference towards him except by supposing that she has formed an improper intimacy with a young man whom he has supported and educated at his residence. His wife, however, confounds him by declaring that she loves the young fellow as her son. He reflects and comes to the conclusion that his wife is chaste, but he himself a little too old to be liked by her. The moral of the story is that persons who are to be united in matrimony ought to be allowed to see and know each other before marriage.	1771

Sept. 17th	216	8vo.	1st	1,000	ditto	1 12 0	Bāneswar Ghosh and Mohummad Tahir, Calcutta.	A long and rambling story of love in which supernatural agencies play an important part and the element of incredibility is very strong. The hero Hurriz takes an ugly old woman for a princess and marries her, and employs a real princess named Gul in her service. In the end, however, Gul's high parentage is discovered by the exercise of certain charms known only to herself and she becomes the hero's wife; whilst the old woman, who has given herself out as a princess, betrays her mean origin by her vulgar tastes and proclivities. The moral of the story seems to be that the nature of a person's origin cannot be kept concealed and is generally revealed by his character and conduct.	69

Oct. 4th	32	8vo.	1st	800	ditto	0 4 0	ditto	The writer of one of the papers in this number says that the enforced widowhood of Hindu women is no measure or proof of their conjugal love and virtue, and that where a wife's love for her husband is really deep and sincere, she naturally prefers, on the death of the latter, to remain a widow. It is such voluntary widowhood that can be admired as a really noble thing.	699
Nov. 3rd	32	8vo.	1st	800	ditto	0 4 0	ditto	The writer of a very short paper in this number is of opinion that the condition of Musulman women is even more miserable and degraded than that of Hindu women. For, though in other respects equally unfortunate, the latter have souls to look after which the former are believed not to have. The consequence is that Musulman women are ill-treated by their husbands and compelled to spend their lives more brutally than Hindu women.	700

Aug. 30th	56	8vo.	1st	600	Printed	0 6 0	Dwijendra Nath Tagore, 6, Dacca-rakā Nath Tagore's Street, Calcutta.	The summary account of Ibn Batuta's travels is continued. The writer of a critique on Michael M. S. Datta's Meghnadbadh Kāhyā is of opinion that that poem does not come up to the standard of an epic or mahābhārata . A Bengali apprentice on a tea-garden in Cachar describes how coolies are treated by their masters. He is of opinion that they are not yet very kindly treated. Another writer explains the attitude of poets towards the social opinions and usages of their time. An interesting paper appears in this number, in which various lines of industry are pointed out and described as being exceedingly well fitted to afford independent occupation to the people of this country.	714
Oct. 10th	96	8vo.	1st	600	ditto	0 6 0	ditto	The writer of another critique on the Meghnadbadh Kāhyā says that there is not much true poetry or high development of character in that poem. But the author of the poem has undoubtedly done a great service to Bengali literature by his introduction and use of blank verse. The dates of the three Baisnab poets, Chandaiddā, Dasanta Kāyā, and Bidyāpati are discussed in another paper. The interesting paper on independent industrial occupations for the people of this country is continued. An account of the political principles of Russian Nihilists is also given.	715
Aug. 27th	8		1st	2,000	ditto			A new journal apparently intended for the exposure of what is considered by the writers to be current Bengali vices, follies, failings, &c. The tone of the journal is one of vulgar levity, and its style essentially low.	716

Oct. 13th	32	8vo.	1st	600	ditto	0 4 0	Jogendra Nath Sādhu, Jorā-sankō, Calcutta.	The writer of the opening article assigns several causes for the absence of industrial enterprise and independence among the educated people of this country. Early marriage, the family system, want of capital, and want of union are considered to be the chief causes. Articles of scientific interest predominate in this journal.	722
Sept. 16th	8	8vo.	1st	600	ditto	Nil	Band of Hope, 21, Beadon Street, Calcutta.	This is a temperance journal. This number contains a short article in which Mr. Rivers Thompson is exhorted to abolish the outstill system.	723

„ 12th	21	8vo.	1st ...	1,000	ditto	0 4 0	Haridas Banerji, 99, College Street, Calcutta.	The writer of the opening article advocates free trade, but thinks that Lord Ripon's tariff policy is marked by partiality to Manchester interests. In another paper the chief faults of Bengali authors, readers, and reviewers are pointed out.	734
„ 23th	24	8vo.	1st ...	1,000	ditto	0 4 0	ditto	Contains an article on Bidyādhara, a Bengali Pandit, who lived in the court of Jey Sing of Jeypore, and planned that beautiful city. In another paper fears are expressed that high education in this country may in all probability be made over to Christian missionaries. It is earnestly hoped, however, that that will not be done. Another writer says that it has become necessary for the future prosperity of India that Hindus and Musulmans should forget their old animosity, and become one in thought and feeling.	735
